Spines slightly faded, rubbed to extremities, several minor scrapes to leather covers, corners bumped. Internally quite bright and clean. William Whewell, (1794-1866), college head and writer on the history and philosophy of science, "Whewell's two major works, History of the Inductive Sciences (3 vols., 1837) and The Philosophy of the Inductive Sciences (2 vols., 1840; 2nd edn 1847), were appreciated as considerable achievements when they appeared. Even his critics drew upon the History, but the Philosophy was seen by some as too close to Immanuel Kant's idealist epistemology. Herschel and Jones, for example, regarded this as inconsistent with the empirical character of scientific inquiry and a threat to its claim to offer true descriptions of the natural world. Today, however, Whewell's work is seen as posing some of the central issues of the philosophy of science the relationship between theory and observation, the role of imagination and hypotheses, and the concept of theoretical revolutions, all supported by appeals to the historical record" (ODNB). His 'Philosophy' ranks "alongside Mill's 'System of Logic' and Herschel's 'Preliminary Discourse on the Study of Natural Philosophy' ... as one of the masterpieces of Victorian philosophy of science" (DSB:XIV:293-4) [002241] £350.00
